

The One Platform Advantage: How Owners and Contractors Win Together

[Article originally appeared in Autodesk Construction Cloud Blog. <https://construction.autodesk.com>]

By Ben Renschen,

The most successful construction projects are rooted in strong collaboration between owners and general contractors.

When these parties understand and support each other, information flows more openly, stakeholders stay aligned, and things just get done faster.

But even the best teams have a hard time working together if they don't share the same platforms, tools, or data standards. Disconnected solutions lead to data silos and inefficiencies, ultimately forcing slow downs in collaboration. That's why owners and GCs should leverage systems that keep everyone on the same page.

This is exactly what you'll learn in our recent webinar, Connected and Collaborative: How Owners and Contractors Win In the Same Platform. Click that link to watch the whole thing, or get the recap below.

This on-demand discussion brings together speakers from General Motors (the owner) and Barton Malow (the GC). They'll discuss how they've established a shared construction platform and the wins they've achieved while doing so.

Specifically, you'll hear from:

- Matt Hedke, Director of VDC Solutions at Barton Malow
- Brian Popis, Senior VDC Engineer at Barton Malow
- John Raad, Engineering Group Manager of Sustainable Workplaces at General Motors
- Eric Thomas, Manager of Construction Thought Leadership and Host of the Digital Builder Podcast at Autodesk

What you'll learn

You'll get an inside look at how top-performing GCs and owners are working together. You'll walk away with knowledge on:

1. Why it's essential for owners and GCs to share the same construction platform
2. Actionable guidance on how to smoothly roll out new solutions and increase adoption within teams

Biden-Harris Administration Expands SBA Pilot Program Targeting Access to Capital for Underserved Entrepreneurs

[Article originally appeared in www.sba.gov]

Vice President Kamala Harris and Administrator Isabella Casillas Guzman, head of the U.S. Small Business Administration (SBA) and the voice for America's 32.5 million small businesses in President Biden's Cabinet, will announce impactful reforms to the agency's Community Advantage (CA) loan program, a key SBA tool for Community Development Financial Institutions (CDFIs), Community Development Companies (CDCs), microlenders and other critical mission-based lending partners, that prioritizes equitable access to capital for low-income borrowers and those from underserved communities.

"America's mission-driven lenders have been a critical partner to the SBA in getting much-needed financial relief to underserved businesses throughout the COVID pandemic. Scaling the SBA's Community Advantage pilot program will help us build on that momentum, create a broader distribution network and better ensure the opportunities of our nation's accelerating recovery are accessible to more entrepreneurs pursuing their American dreams of starting and growing a successful business," said Administrator Guzman. "The Community Advantage pilot expansion and reforms reflect the central role that President Biden and Vice President Harris have given to building equity across this Administration and removing historic inequities and barriers that have limited economic growth for all. My thanks to Vice President Harris, a long-time champion for Community Development Financial Institutions and other mission-driven lenders, for supporting this important change and helping to improve access to capital for more American entrepreneurs."

Among the reforms being announced today for the Community Advantage program, the SBA will:

- Extend the pilot program to September 30, 2024, providing more certainty for the Community Advantage program, which was set to end in September 2022.
- Lift the four-year lender moratorium and enable the SBA to grow this important lender network, opening up a critical capital program to more mission-based lenders across the country.

- Increase the maximum loan size, the new expanded number of lenders will be allowed to access the SBA's 7(a) government-guaranteed loan program at lending levels up to $350,000, which represent an increase over the current levels of $250,000.
- Remove the restrictions that can keep individuals with criminal backgrounds from accessing the Community Advantage program.
- Simplify underwriting and collateral requirements for borrowers and lenders, including increasing the maximum unsecured loan size from $25,000 to $50,000, removing barriers that disproportionately impact underserved borrowers.
- Introduce additional abilities for lenders to make revolvers and lines of credit, interest-only periods, and other loan modifications that meet borrowers where they are to best serve their capital needs.
- Redefine packaging fee guidelines to better enable CDFIs, CDCs, and mission lenders

WORKFORCE EQUALITY

Mayor Garcetti Signs Executive Directive 34, Deepening The City's Commitment To Workplace Equity

[Article originally appeared in www.lamayor.org]

Mayor Eric Garcetti signed Executive Directive 34: Citywide Workplace Equity, outlining new measures to elevate the City's commitment to diversity, equity, and inclusion, including the implementation of a new Citywide Workplace Equity Policy that was unanimously adopted by the City Council.

"This comprehensive policy outlines employees' rights and responsibilities, and also cements the City's commitment to fostering a workplace rooted in empathy, inclusion, and mutual respect — values necessary for the City to recruit and retain employees who both reflect and understand the diverse communities they serve," said Mayor Eric Garcetti.

Executive Directive 34 will expand the Personnel Department's focus on preventing haarrassment and discrimination to a more systemic and preventative focus on diversity, equity and inclusion. Through the establishment of a new Equity Review Panel and the Office of Workplace Equity in the Personnel Department, Los Angeles will create a more equitable and inclusive environment for employees of the City of Los Angeles. The signing culminates over four years of work with City departments, labor, and elected offices on this policy.

"All of our City employees deserve to be treated with dignity and respect. This Workplace Equity policy clearly defines that goal and the means of achieving it," said Councilmember Paul Krekorian. "It will reduce costs to the City associated with litigation and mismanagement by requiring managers and supervisors to intervene before workplaces become unsafe or unwelcoming."

The Workplace Equity Policy was developed by combining key points from over a dozen existing documents that pertain to workplace conduct, as well as incorporating new best practices. It includes new prohibitions against conduct like bullying and microaggressions. This policy will be supported by mandatory training to ensure all employees understand what is expected of them under the new policy.

"This Workplace Equity Policy represents the very best of who we are as a City Government: Inclusive, welcoming, fair and respectful," said Los Angeles City Attorney Mike Feuer. "This Policy reflects the hard work of Departments across the City to fully embrace and encourage workplaces that celebrate diversity and thrive."

These efforts began in 2018 and were spearheaded by the Harassment and Discrimination Working Group under the Mayor's Risk Reduction Cabinet, which is co-chaired by Councilmember Paul Krekorian and City Attorney Mike Feuer. The early accomplishments of the Risk Reduction Cabinet Working Group included the development and launch of MyVoiceLA and Executive Directive 23: Harassment and Discrimination.

"The City of Los Angeles has always been a leader in setting policies that foster equity in the workplace. Executive Directive 34 collocates those policies into one comprehensive Workplace Equity Policy that is easily accessible and increases accountability for all City employees," said Dana Brown, General Manager of the Personnel Department.

WASHINGTON STATE

5 major things the Washington Legislature approved in 2022

[Article originally appeared in <https://crosscut.com>]

By Melissa Santos,

Election years mean short, 60-day sessions at the Washington State Legislature. And, while sometimes that means lawmakers don't do all that much, in 2022, they broke that pattern by approving several major pieces of legislation and a big increase in state spending.

Before adjourning Thursday, Washington's Legislature approved a ban on selling large-capacity magazines for firearms, a proposal that had languished in Olympia since 2017.

Lawmakers also approved a new transportation package that will spend about $17 billion over the next 16 years on highways, transit projects and bridges. The plan includes $1 billion for a new bridge over the Columbia River at Interstate 5, a project politicians have bickered over for a decade.

At the same time, lawmakers backtracked on a few other policies they passed in recent years. They revised some of the landmark police accountability measures they approved last year, plus delayed a long-term care program designed to help care for aging Washingtonians.

Here's a look at some of the biggest decisions that state legislators made before their session ended March 10. The Legislature isn't scheduled to meet again until January 2023.

Bigger-than-usual budget increase

The supplemental budget the Legislature approved on Thursday increases state spending to about $64 billion over two years — an increase of roughly $5 billion from the budget lawmakers approved last April.

The 8% spending increase isn't being paid for through new taxes, but instead from existing tax collections, which state officials now predict will come in much higher than previously projected.

On top of that, lawmakers are doling out more than $1 billion in unspent federal COVID-19 relief money, with large portions of that aid going toward schools, housing programs and public health.

State Sen. Christine Rolfes, a Democrat from Bainbridge Island who is the Senate's lead budget writer, said the investments are about "how to move the entire state out of COVID, out of the pandemic and into a shared prosperity."

The updated budget includes $350 million to shore up the state's paid family leave program, which has been in such high demand that it is facing a deficit.

The budget also puts $351 million toward caring for adults with developmental disabilities or other long-term care needs, while transferring more than $2 billion to help pay for the state's new transportation package.

About $200 million will go toward grants to re-invest in communities most targeted by the war on drugs, while $150 million will set up a new state program to provide low-interest student loans.

To address homelessness, the new budget spends about $220 million — a mixture of federal and state funds — that includes about $45 million for rental assistance. Additionally, the operating budget transfers about $650 million to the state construction budget, which in turn will spend more than $400 million on building affordable housing, enhanced shelter space and permanent supportive housing.

Republicans opposed the budget in part because it didn't use the state's rebounding tax revenues to enact a broad-based tax cut. State Rep. Drew Stokesbary, R-Auburn, previously proposed an alternate plan that would have cut the state sales tax by one percentage point, but that proposal didn't end up in the final budget.

"Our inability to deliver tax relief, I think, is a big disappointment, especially as our constituents face 7-plus-percent inflation," Stokesbary said Wednesday.

Democratic leaders said they provided tax relief in other ways, including by eliminating state business taxes for businesses grossing under $125,000 a year and providing additional small-business tax credits.

Other items in the budget include $4 million to help reduce the use of solitary confinement in prisons and an additional $12 million to expand the state's film incentive program, which aims to get more movies made in Washington.

Delaying the long-term care tax

Last year, more than 450,000 people said "no thanks" to the state's new long-term care program by taking advantage of a one-time chance to opt out of the program and its 0.58% payroll tax. The long-term care program, commonly called WA Cares, is supposed to provide up to $36,500 per person over their lifetime to help pay for nursing care and other services people may need as they age.

The high number of opt-outs caused some soul searching among state legislators leading up to Jan. 1, when the new payroll tax was scheduled to take effect.

Quickly, the Democratic-controlled Legislature approved a measure delaying the program — and the tax that pays for it — for 18 months. Now, under House Bill 1732, the long-term care payroll tax won't take effect until July 2023, with the first benefits slated to be paid out in July 2026.

The Legislature also wanted to address concerns about how some people would be required to pay the tax, but then wouldn't qualify for benefits. HB 1732 allows workers who are nearing retirement — many of whom would not have qualified for the program under the original law — to receive partial benefits.

Another new law, House Bill 1733, will let disabled military veterans opt out of the program, since they already receive long-term care coverage through the federal government. The same measure creates new exemptions for temporary nonimmigrant workers, military spouses and people who work in Washington but live elsewhere — people who would be unlikely to benefit from the program, which right now doesn't allow people to claim benefits if they move out of state or live somewhere else.

Legislators said they're still looking at ways to make the WA Cares benefits portable, so that people who work in Washington state for years but decide to retire to a different state can still receive money. But that issue remains unresolved for now.

Ban on large-capacity gun magazines

In the final week of the 2022 session, Washington state lawmakers approved a ban on selling large-capacity magazines for guns, a policy that has stalled in Olympia for half a decade. Gov. Jay Inslee is expected to sign Senate Bill 5078 into law soon.

The legislation, sought by state Attorney General Bob Ferguson, will prohibit the sale, manufacturing and distribution of ammunition magazines that hold more than 10 rounds.

Larger-capacity magazines that Washingtonians already own won't be criminalized under the bill. But new sales of such magazines will be a gross misdemeanor, punishable by up to a year in jail and a $5,000 fine.

Republicans and gun-rights advocates objected strenuously to the measure, saying it would infringe upon people's Second Amendment right to bear arms.

Critics also said the measure would ban magazines that come standard with many firearms, while impeding people's ability to defend themselves.

"Would 10 rounds be enough to defend your life against someone who was intent on taking it?" asked state Rep. Kelly Chambers, R-Puyallup, during a March 4 debate on the House floor. "What if you were defending your spouse, your children — would 10 rounds be enough? I think not."

Several people who have been personally affected by mass shootings, however, supported the policy, saying it would make Washington safer and reduce the deadliness of mass shootings.

Biden-Harris Administration Expands SBA Pilot Program Targeting Access to Capital for Underserved Entrepreneurs

participating in the Community Advantage program to scale and increase volume to underserved communities.

History of the Community Advantage Pilot Program: Filling Gaps by Connecting Underserved Small Businesses to Capital

Designed to meet the credit, management, and technical assistance needs of small businesses in underserved markets, the SBA's Community Advantage pilot loan program was launched during the Obama-Biden Administration and originally set to expire in September 2022. The program was intended to provide mission-oriented lenders, primarily nonprofit financial intermediaries focused on economic development, access to 7(a) loan guarantees previously for loans of only $250,000 or less. Community Advantage continues to be the best avenue to allow mission-driven lenders to access SBA 7(a) loans. The SBA's goals for the Community Advantage program include:

- Increasing access to credit for small businesses located in underserved areas;
- Expanding points of access to the SBA 7(a) loan program by allowing participation of non-traditional, mission-oriented lenders; and
- Providing Management and Technical Assistance (M&TA) to small businesses, as needed.

To learn more about Community Advantage and additional small business financial assistance programs, visit your local SBA office at www.sba.gov.

How Owners and Contractors Win Together

3. Examples of project successes that General Motors and Barton Malow have gained with a shared construction platform

The perils of not having a shared platform

General Motors and Barton Malow have a longstanding history and have worked together on many successful projects over the last several decades. In fact, Barton Malow has been named as a General Motors Supplier of the Year five times now, and they have plans to collaborate on other major projects in the future.

"One of the things that we often hear from a lot of partners throughout the industry is how much they really appreciate our level of collaboration and partnership between General Motors and Barton Malow," says Matt.

However, as the industry continues to evolve and projects become increasingly complex, both parties knew that they had to find even better ways to work together.

Here are some of the biggest pain points faced by General Motors and Barton Malow before they moved to a shared platform.

A severed flow of information

Without a shared platform, teams experience a disconnect with the flow of information. As Brian puts it, "when you have all these different programs in different places, you essentially have a severed connection between the flow of information."

As a result, team members don't always get the info they need, which leads to confusion and unnecessary delays.

Eric weighs in, and says that teams that don't have solid platforms in place suffer a myriad of project issues, "including out of date information, inefficient workflows, and lack of communication."

Security concerns

There's also a matter of security. People need different levels of permissions to access project data, and managing multiple users is more difficult when teams are using solutions that don't connect with each other.

Inconsistent processes

From the owner's side, John says they grappled with a lack of consistency with their processes.

"When everybody's working on these different platforms, there are almost too many options for people. And what we've found is a lot of them would just come up with their particular combination of programs to make it work," John explains.

"The big pain point is that nobody's consistent. So, when somebody comes and tries to jump into a new project, there's a whole set of things they need to learn."

How owners and contractors multiply each others' wins

To solve the above pain points, Barton Malow and General Motors decided to transition to a shared platform — Autodesk Construction Cloud. This move helped them unlock several wins, including:

Eliminating silos between the owner and GC

Having a shared platform eliminated silos between General Motors and Barton Malow.

"There was a barrier and there were silos between us and General Motors in the past," says Brian. "By having those workflows hosted in a place where stakeholders have access to them, we can make sure that everybody is seeing the latest and greatest stuff. So, that's just a quantum leap in and of itself."

He adds, "If General Motors needs to see something, or if one of our design partners needs to see something, they can access it, as opposed to being in all these different programs."

SUCCESS STORIES

Cindy Greaver, Mrs. G's

[Article originally appeared in <https://cameonetwork.org>]

Cindy Greaver and her husband, Kent, began Mrs. G's over twenty years ago when she started making hot pepper jellies as gifts for friends and family.

Since then, her heady, homemade confections (used on everything from Jalapeno Glazed Brussels Sprouts to Spicy Garlic Lime Shrimp Skewers) have caught fire with customers and fans across the country.

In 2013, Cindy reached out to the Inland Empire SBDC for help expanding Mrs. G's from a hobby to a professionally branded, artisanal product.

Ever the humble business owner, Cindy says, "I didn't have a huge vision for this when it all started. I just wanted to make a good, local product that represented Temecula and my community."

Cindy knew that hard work alone would not guarantee her business's survival or success.

That's why she reached out to SBDC consultants and food industry experts as soon as she was ready to turn her hobby into a business.

Greg Bell, an SBDC business consultant and food industry expert says that with a product as good as Cindy's, it was just a matter of getting it in the hands (and on the plates) of more people.

"When I met Cindy, she loved her small-town image but wanted to grow her business. Our focus became broadening her tasting and marketing efforts to a wider market. We worked together to repackage her jelly gift idea for the holidays, included a window in the packaging so consumers could see the product, repositioned her marketing spend and increased inventory. Sometimes the hardest thing to do is to see and transform your passion project as an actual scalable business and with Cindy's product, tasting is believing so duplicating sampling efforts was key," says Greg.

The road to success

Over three months during the holiday season, Cindy increased her holiday sales seven times over. Now Mrs. G's, only in its sixth year of business, has increased its annual sales tenfold since its initial launch.

As with every business, there were unavoidable obstacles along the way. But Cindy took them all in stride and refused to give up even when quitting seemed like the easier, much less expensive option.

Paul Nolta, Assistant Director of the Inland Empire SBDC, specializes in strategic planning and financials and says that it was the quality of Cindy's character that helped Mrs. G's succeed.

"Cindy's spirit of entrepreneurship and willingness to take risks make her really stand out. Cindy came into our Temecula Valley Entrepreneurs Exchange outreach office in 2013 and I have worked with her since. Starting a food-based business is a giant hill to climb. The starting point was working through the legal and financial steps needed to bring this idea into reality. We worked together on license and permit requirements, break-evens at different price points and marketing strategy. With Cindy's determination and a solid plan we continue to execute, monitor and adjust for growth," says Paul.
